The Ruby Red's Band may be the oldest, continuously operating jazz band in Georgia. The band was formed in early 1966 to perform nightly at a rowdy beer hall and banjo sing-along parlor called Ruby Red's Warehouse, at 58 Ellis Street in downtown Atlanta, Georgia, and has been playing throughout the Southeast ever since.

Over our 39 year history we've played for nearly every major corporate entity in the state! Then there's the thousands of private parties, land auctions, professional sports events, conventions of every kind, store openings, concerts, topping-off parties and ribbon cuttings, ice-cream socials, weddings, divorces, jazz funerals, country clubs, and all-night street dances... we can't even begin to count the parades...

All that longevity must count for something and we think it says lots about how much fun you can have listening to great music played by good musicians. Our clients, who keep coming back year after year, apparently agree.

The Ruby Red's Band plays a wide variety of music including banjo sing-along from the turn of the century (LAST century!), Roaring 20's, Tin Pan Alley standards, blues, bluegrass, country, folk, old-time Rock'N Roll and our specialty - New Orleans Jazz. We sprinkle in a large dose of humor (if appropriate for your event) and keep the party moving and your audience involved. The band can headline a concert, open for another act, provide softer background music or wake up your clients in style to kick off a breakfast meeting with flair! We've done it all... and we have the experience and know-how to get it all done.
